To Wash Blankets.

A housewife whose blankets always retain their softness without shrinking gives the secret. Make a suds in a tub of any good soap, having the water hot. Dissolve it in a tablespoonful of borax. Around solled spots on the blankets run threads rive to-morrow to visit her sister. Mrs. so that they may be found after they are wet. Rinse the blankets up and down vigorously, rubbing only the marked spots. Never rub soap directly on them. Prepare in the same way and put the blankets in it. Rinse them up and down in this for several minutes. Then rinse in hot water which has been softened with borax. Rinse through as many hot waters as necessary to remove all the soap. At the last run the blankets through the wringer. A hot day with a good breeze is the best for drying. Do not leave the blankets out until the dew falls or until the temperature goes down. They ought to come in before sun-

NEW DRINKS THE RAGE

As the warmer days of summer approach and the crowds begin to throng the streets, the various soda fountains of our city grow steadily into favor. Weary and heated by the summer sun, the shoppers and street-goers flock to these resorts to receive a cooling drink, thereby refreshing themselves for the further duties of the

as a soda town, which a visit to one of our fashionable fountains will best indicate. The popular demand is now for fancy drinks, ices and creams. "A few years ago a menu consisting of lemonade, chocolate soda and plain ice cream was amply sufficient to satisfy the public," says .Mr. Frank G. Gandall, the professional dispenser of the Craig candy store. "The present demand for fancy drinks requires will come soon to visit Mr. and Mrs. Charles an up-to-date dispenser, who is resource-Lilly at their home on North Meridian ful and capable of originating new and palatable ices and creams. The old ruse of switching new names to old drinks is a thing of the past and is now used only by incapable or inexperienced dispensers. The public requires genuine new drinks-novel both in name and material. Chocolate soda and sundaes always were leaders and alcross-roads drug shop. The concocting of novel and palatable fancies is a different thing entirely and has become a science the school of which has but few apt pupils. Mrs. Perley Bonte Raymond entertained | At the more fashionable fountains liquor is last Thursday with a luncheon in honor no longer used and, therefore, the title 'Ladies' Saloon' has passed into history Places of this kind, though popular with certain people, are soon shunned by the better class. The use of pure materials has proven to be the keynote to success in every line of our production. For instance, in the operation of our ice cream factory nothing but the purest ingredients is used such as sweet cream, vanilla bean and pulverized sugar. The same strictness is maintained in the making of all our candies and drinks. This policy is certainly more expensive, but time has proven the ultimate profit thereof. "In response to the demand there will be many new drinks this season, while, of course, those gaining popular favor last year will be retained. Some of our original creations which have pleased in the past are raspberry and cherry salads in the ices Mrs. Edwin Buttolph, who was the guest and pistachia bisque and frozen nourgot in the cream, while the Arctic sherbet, Boston fizz, champagne and Honolulu creams have many admirers. The Persian nut sundae is also constantly in demand." With the variety of ices, drinks and creams now on the menu at the fashionable fountain, there will be no chance this summer for those, even of the most delicate and critical taste, to visit these resorts without receiving perfect satisfaction.

OLD LADY WAS DISGUSTED

Her Visit to Betsy Ross House Was Disappointing. Philadelphia Record.

They were a very old man and a very old woman. They were doing Philadelphia Betsy Ross. There was not much that escaped their observant eyes. They examined every tile in the old fireplace; they asked as many questions as the small on it, and they made the guide, who guite flatters himself that he is a compendium of universal knowledge, feel like twentyfive cents with five more cents added to it. At length the eye of the old lady was attracted by a baby coach that was standing in the hall. "Herace, Horace, come here!" she cried, and her husband obediently hurried to follow his more observant spouse into the unexplored regions. The baby coach was a spick-and-span modern affair, such as one sees many mothers wheeling in the parks. "Do you suppose this belonged to Betsy?" she asked in an awed whisper. "Shouldn't be surprised," he replied in a whisper equally awed. "They keep most of the relics of them great people.' "Miss, come here," the old woman called to the girl who is in charge of the correspondence connected with the Betsy Ross "Does this baby coach belong to Betsy

"No." answered the young woman, "that coach belongs to the lady who takes care of the house." "Humph!" exclaimed the old woman, to keep things here to deceive people. Ain't you any relation to Betsy Ross?" There was a gleam of indignation in the sight-

"No," meekly answered the young at tendant, "I am no relation to Betsy Ross. I am employed to take care of the books The old woman and old man exchanged glances. Another deception had been practiced. There was a moment's painful silence, and then the old lady said: "Come on, Horace; I guess we've had enough of this humbug. I've had all of the Betsy Rosses I want."
